What Is Seen in The Shops

This column is not an advertising column, but is conducted by The Shopper to aid The Times' women readers who are intereste in what the shops offer. Every item mentioned has been personally inspected by The Shopper and bargains pointed out are based on a carefully considered opinion of values.

may have on the subject. Everybody has taken up the French fashion of wearing felt hats the 1st of September, and this idea makes for early millinery openings. Some of the larger stores are holding their annual autumn openings this week, notable among which is the fine display that S. Kann, Sons & Co. are offering.

As usual, the Paris room, where the latest French importations are shown, is the center of attraction, but there is much that will interest the buyer who has less means at her command. In the ready-to-wear department, where strictly tailored hats are offered, some very handsome but quiet models are being shown, which are within the reach of everybody. The college maid, and the school girl have not been forgotten, for some very chic models, which will stand any amount of rough usage, wind, and weather, have been provided for them. The offerings of the American milliners are up to the standards set by the foreign artists, and while not so dashing in style, will find favor with more conservative buyers. To be absolutely in the mode, the hat worn by the woman of fashion this autumn and winter will be either as tiny as possible or as big as a cart wheel. There is no middle ground this season of 1911-12.

The materials that are being shown by S. Kann, Sons & Co., are velvet, felt, and the long haired felt, which is better known under the trade name of velours. Trimming is largely confined to feathers of every description, including the new goura feathers, which have been employed instead of aigrettes, for fluffy trimming. A late act of the New York Legislature has made the wearing of aigrettes a criminal offense in that State, and on all the chapeaux that have been brought from that city, the goura feathers have been effectively employed in place of the more expensive plumage of the egret.

Absolutely guaranteed silk half hose for men are being offered by an F street haberdasher for 50 cents a pair. These should not be confounded with the plaited hose offered for this price, with which no guarantee is given. Every thread in the hose mentioned is pure silk, and they come in all colors

A riot of vellow and royal purple greets visitors at King's Palace, where the annual fall opening of the millinery department is taking place. lying out the color scheme. Within the store the millinery department is filled with enthusiastic women who rhapsodize over the soft velvet and feathered creations that had their inspirations in the studios of Roger, Reboux, Talbot and other well known French a designers. One especially handsome model had a crown of the new tapestry ribbon-velvet on satin, in a subdued furniture. It is shown in an F street tone of green shading into electric blue. The brim of the hat was of electric blue velvet, and the trimming consisted of made rosebuds in which the velvet and ribbon were cunningly combined with dull gold. Two spikes of velvet completed the artistic ersemble of a very fetching piece of millinery. Another amazing creation from the house of Perriot was of velvet in the new shade known as Burgundy. The crown and brim of this material was slashed to show an inset of apricot satin. The sole trimming of this hat consisted of two huge apples in natural shades, with their foliage. In medium priced hats, the felts, trimmed with cords, crisp little satin bows, or feather bands are favored. Some of them come with crowns of one ma-terial and brims of another. Crowns of Shepherd's plaid, with brims of black or colored velvet are novel, as well as appealing to those "whose desire is for something different than the ordinary felt hat of one color. These plaid crowned hats are simply trimmed with a heavy chenelle cord and tassell, the cord sometimes being as heavy as a rope. Hoods and the larger hat models are much in evidence among the hats shown in the King's Palace opening. Several tables have been arranged with hats of one shade, so that the woman who has already decided upon the color she will wear this winter, may have many models from which a choice may be made.

Manicure sets for travelers are being Many Make Mistake sold in a traveling goods house near Twelfth and F streets. They come packed in rather a large sized buffer of Parisian ivory. The receptacle contains a file, a tiny pair of scissors, a package of emory boards and two compartments.

A description does not do justice to the latest novelty that is being shown at the Juliet shop, and which is known as the tower ostrich feather hat. It is the latest thing in Paris, according to my informant, a hat not unlike the tingaling shape of recent memory, coma-ling shape of recent memory, completely covered with ostrich feather bands, and trimmed simply with a straight fibred ostrich quill at the left side. It comes in nearly every shade, and in combinations of black and white, brown and green, and other chic har-

Then another novelty in the Juliet shop is the feather sets of three pieces. hats, stoles, and muffs. Maribou, which will run furs a close race this season, is used for carrying out a clever idea which is exclusive with this shop. A large flat muff, satin lined, opens to display a bag that is sufficiently capacity of the carry nurse handkerchief. display a bag that is sufficiently capacity out to carry purse, handkerchief, and all the other sartorial impedimentia with which the average woman burdens herself. The stole is large and flat, and the maribou bat is on the soft hood model, coming far over the ears and face, almost extinguishing the wearer. Jike the snuffer on a candle.

It is none too early to begin to talk about the fall fashions in millinery, gowns, and wraps. The hat has rather a high crown and a rolling brim, turned up at the back. The only other trimming is a twist of gold slik, which encircles the crown. This hat was made in the Paris branch of the Juliet shop, and is one of the exclusive models of this firm.

This house also carries several distinct novelties in the shape of flowers of velvet, silk, and tinsel, which are intended for use as hat trimming and as garnitures on evening gowns, or as corsage bouquets. The process of making these flowers is an intricate one, the secret being known to but few of the French artists, and the Juliet shop has the sole Washington right for their sale. Some of the corsage bouquets are so natural as to almost defy quets are so natural as to almost defy detection except by actually touching

The Palais Royal, although still in the hands of the builders, opened its doors this week for its annual autumnal display of millinery. In the artistic showroom have been crowded the most charming models that were brought across the Atlantic by this firm's buyer in a recent trip abroad. From the Palsis Royal's own workroom any numter of additional models have been added, making the display one of the largest and hardsomest that this firm has ever placed before the public. In the models that are shown, it is noted that estrich feathers still hold their popularity in the minds of fair femininity. They are employed as trimming bands. Entire crowns are made from them, or Entire crowns are made from them, or

One of the new ideas in trimming, the Pocahontas feather, is being shown on a number of hats in the Palais Royal's opening. This feather band, of the sort associated with Indian chiefs and their daughters, is high in the center and tapers at the side to almost nothing. It is formed of stiff feathers and reaches entirely around the crown of the hat, no other trimming being necessary. It is especially adapted for tailormade hats for general wear.

Here's Way to Clean Girl's Hair Ribbons

When there are several schoolgir daughters in the family the expenditure on hair ribbons becomes quite a con-siderable item. Fastidious mothers who declare that ribbons never look well when washed should try the following method:

Make a mixture of three ounces of soft soap, three tablespoonfuls of hongy, to a teacupful of gin and water.

The ribbon is place on a board and scrubbed with the mixture. It is then the sounce over a line to drive, then put rinsed over a line to drip; then put between cloths and ironed by drawing the ribbons from under the iron. This prevents creasing and a stringy ap-pearance at finish. The iron should be kept still, with pressure upon it. White ribbons will not turn yellow when washed if the water is warm instead of hot, and the soap used a fine quality. Rinse in three waters, the last being a strong blue, Hang in the sun until half dry; then press under clean muslin with a warm

Sweet Potato Pie.

To one cup of boiled sifted sweet po-tatoes add one egg, two cups of milk, a pinch of salt, a seasoning of cinnamou, and sweeten to taste. Line a deep plate with puff paste, fill with the sweet potato mixture and bake until done. This is cooked the same as a squash or number pile and resembles a number or pumpkin pie and resembles a pump-kin pie in taste, in fact you can hardly tell the difference in taste or looks be-tween a sweet potato pie and in pump-kin pie.

"Don't tell that to me," said the dog; "I was brought up with you and know all your tricks."

Spotty limped into the house and the cook put a piece of cloth around the injured paw and gave Spotty a saucer of milk, and soon she was asleep and forgot her troubles.

After the cook had left the kitchen for the night Spotty heard something in the pantry. "That sounds like a mouse," said Spotty, walking very cautiously toward the pantry.

She looked in and there on the shelf was a mouse. Spotty forgot the sore paw and sprang to the shelf, but the injured paw slipped and over she rolled on the floor.

Anty Drudge as a Beauty Doctor.

Mrs. De Spair-"If you'd seen my complexion before I married, you wouldn't believe I could lose it so soon. And look at my hands—all red and chapped. I'd give anything to be cured."

Anty Drudge-'It'll cost you only a small amount, my dear. Just buy a cake of Fels-Naptha soap. Then you can do your washing without boiling the clothes and without hard rubbing. Your complexion will improve when you quit steaming it every wash day. And the cool or lukewarm water you use with Fels-Naptha won't hurt your hands."

In the heat of summer, wash day assumes double terrors for many women.

When the very earth seems panting under the sun's heat it is awful to have to make a big fire and boil and toil most of the day.

It's easier, better, wiser to use Fels-Naptha soap which takes the place of the hot fire, the hot water, the suffocating steam, the back-breaking rubbing.

It makes the clothes cleaner and sweeter than they can be made by the old boiling, toiling method.

You don't need to rub the dirt out because Fels-Naptha loosens and dissolves it.

Of eourse, clothes last about twice as long-to say nothing of complexions, soft hands, good health in general.

Fels-Naptha soap is as good for every other kind of housework as for the wash,for cleaning windows, glass and china, for scrubbing floors and brightening up woodwork.

Remember to use only cool or lukewarm water. Just follow directions on the red and green wrapper in which you buy the soap.
